George was not known as the Patron Saint of England, till the time of Richard I. (1189-1199,) who during the Crusades placed his army under his especial protection, and made the name of the Saint his battle cry. A great national Council, held at Oxford, 1222, commanded his feast to be kept as a holiday of lesser rank; and it still holds its place in our Calendar among the black letter days. By his name Edward III. in 1330 instituted the most ancient and noble order of knighthood in Europe, that of the Garter. April, 1879. Beneath the figure of S. George, in one of the west lancets of the north transept, is that of S. Barbara, which is also copied from the glass at Ludlow of which I spoke in the Magazine of February. S. Barbara, whom we have already...
