This book investigates from a diversity of perspectives how bhakti in general contributed to the formation of early modern literary culture in north India. The eighteen papers presented at the Tenth International Bhakti Conference: Early Modern literatures in North India at Sapientia-Hungarian University of Transylvania, in Miercurea Ciuc, Romania between 22-24 July 2009 address questions on how devotional literature was an important vehicle of community formation and how it dealt with the wider society. They also explore how...
